

PRESS RELEASE

GREATER ACCESS TO JUSTICE THROUGH INDEXATION OF LEGAL AID ELIGIBILITY THRESHOLDS

Montreal, May 31, 2021 – As of today, the legal aid eligibility thresholds increased by 3.1 %, which is equal to the percentage by which the minimum wage increased on May 1, 2021.

The Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Québec, Simon Jolin-Barrette, and the Chairman of the Commission des services juridiques, M^e Yvan Niquette, made the announcement today.

M^e Niquette recalled that, on January 1, 2016, the eligibility thresholds for no-cost legal aid were increased, with the minimum wage as a reference point. The current indexation therefore maintains the eligibility thresholds at this level.

As a result, a person who is single and works a 35-hour week at minimum wage, which is $24,570 per year, has access to a lawyer, at no cost, within the framework of the legal aid system. Moreover, legal aid services are free to a family of two adults and two children whose income is less than $40,292.

The Québec legal aid plan includes a component for individuals whose income falls between the eligibility thresholds for free legal aid and the maximum thresholds requiring a contribution (contributory legal aid). According to M^e Niquette, the contributory scheme offers a unique formula that allows individuals to be represented in court by a lawyer while knowing, in advance, the maximum amount of their legal fees and the costs that may be claimed from them. The contributory scheme allows an individual to receive legal services if his or her income, assets and liquidities match the eligibility scale in effect and if the individual pays a contribution ranging from $100 to $800, depending on the composition of the person's family and the person's financial situation. The eligibility scale for legal aid under the contributory scheme also increased by 3.1 %.

The Commission des services juridiques developed tools to evaluate the number of applicants who, were it not for the increase in the financial eligibility thresholds for legal aid since January 1, 2014, would not have qualified for legal aid. For the 2020-2021 year, the number of applicants amounted to 19,704.

“Offering Quebecers an accessible, efficient and modern justice system is a priority. The services provided by the Commission des services juridiques and by lawyers who work on legal aid mandates are essential and promote access to justice for our most vulnerable citizens. It is essential that the services offered be tailored to the needs and realities of Québec families,” said Justice Minister Simon Jolin-Barrette.

The new eligibility scale for services at no cost is as follows:

| Class of Applicant | Maximum Annual Income |
|--|------------------------------|
| For a single person | $24,570 |
| For an applicant whose family is comprised of: | |
| one adult and one child | $30,062 |
| one adult and 2 children or + | $32,092 |
| spouses without children | $34,195 |
| spouses with 1 child | $38,259 |
| spouses with 2 children or + | $40,291 |

The new eligibility scale for legal aid under the contributory scheme is as follows:

| Class of Applicant | Maximum Annual Income |
|--|------------------------------|
| For a single person | $34,321 |
| For an applicant whose family is comprised of: | |
| one adult and one child | $41,982 |
| one adult and 2 children or + | $44,818 |
| spouses without children | $47,762 |
| spouses with 1 child | $53,437 |
| spouses with 2 children or + | $56,276 |
